Governor Bullock on Earth Day: “We must protect our public lands, clean air and water, abundant wildlife, and the thousands of Montana jobs that rely on them.”

HELENA, Mont. – Governor Steve Bullock today celebrated Earth Day by doubling-down on his commitment to protecting Montana’s clean air and water, protecting access to public lands, and responsibly managing the state’s wildlife.

“Today we celebrate our outdoor heritage and the values we share as Montanans,” said Governor Bullock. “On Earth Day we are reminded that Montana’s future is worth protecting – our public lands, our clean air and water, and our abundant wildlife – and the thousands of Montana jobs that rely on them.”
